1. Get training in dance: The first step to becoming a choreographer is to develop a strong foundation in dance. Students can take dance classes in various styles such as ballet, contemporary, jazz, hip hop, or tap.
2. Learn choreography techniques: Students should also learn the fundamentals of choreography, such as creating movement phrases, using music as inspiration, and developing a unique style.
3. Gain experience: Students can gain experience in choreography by participating in school or community dance performances, working with local theater groups, or choreographing routines for their own dance groups.

REPORT ON MOTIVATIONAL LECTURE "LECTURE ON BIODIVERSITY & SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT"

Name of the Session : lecture on Biodiversity & Sustainable Development
Date : 22th October 2019
Time : 12:30PM
Resource Person : Mr. Chandrakant Tyagi

Organized by : Alumni Association Cell

Hello Students,

Today we will be discussing Biodiversity and Sustainable Development.

Biodiversity refers to the variety of life on Earth, including the diversity of species, ecosystems, and genetic diversity. Biodiversity is essential for the functioning of ecosystems, providing essential services such as air and water purification, nutrient cycling, pollination, and pest control. Biodiversity also has cultural, aesthetic, and recreational value, and is important for human health and well-being.

Sustainable development, on the other hand, refers to the development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. Sustainable development aims to balance economic, social, and environmental considerations, and promote sustainable use of natural resources.

The relationship between biodiversity and sustainable development is closely intertwined. Biodiversity loss can have negative impacts on sustainable development, as it can lead to the loss of essential ecosystem services and reduce resilience to environmental change. Conversely, sustainable development can support biodiversity conservation by promoting sustainable use of natural resources and reducing the negative impacts of human activities on the environment.

Hello Students,

Today we will be discussing the Food Corporation of India (FCI).

The Food Corporation of India (FCI) is a government organization established in 1965 under the Food Corporation Act. Its primary objective is to ensure food security and price stability by procuring, storing, and distributing food grains across India. FCI is one of the largest public sector undertakings in India, employing thousands of people across the country.

FCI plays a crucial role in India's food security by procuring food grains from farmers and distributing them through a network of fair price shops. It also operates buffer stock operations to maintain food grain reserves for emergency situations. FCI procures wheat and rice from farmers at the minimum support price (MSP) announced by the government and distributes them through various channels, including public distribution system (PDS), open market sales, and exports. Apart from procurement and distribution, FCI is also involved in several other activities, including storage, transportation, and quality control of food grains. It maintains a network of godowns and warehouses across the country for storing food grains. FCI also operates its own transportation system to move food grains from the procurement centers to the storage facilities and distribution centers.
